Being good at studying is a skill that anyone can learn. There are some strategies (策略) that will work and make a difference to your study.

Create a study space. It's good for you if you have a desk for studying. Make sure your space has good lighting and take away anything that might break your attention. Place the things you need to study, like pens, notebooks and the tape, near the area so that you can use them whenever you want. What's more, ask the people around you not to disturb (打扰) you while you're learning.

Take a 10 to 15-minute break every hour when you study. You want to make full use of your time, so you might think having a break is a bad idea. However, trying to focus (关注) on your study for too long can make you feel exhausted. You'll be refreshed and ready to pick back up where you stop after a rest. Use your breaks for something that cheers you up, like getting a snack or going for a short walk. But remember that don't turn on the TV or play computer games.

Making connections to learn knowledge. Sometimes you might feel like what you're learning in class has nothing to do with your real life, but that's usually not true. You can find connections between them. And those can help you understand the materials (材料) and remember them better. Try to brainstorm connections between what you're studying and something you've experienced. For example, when your father wants to paint the walls, maybe you can use math to calculate (计算) the area of them.

21. _____ can't be put near our desk when studying according to the passage.

5. Different countries and cultures have their own rules of polite speech. When learning a language, it is important to learn the rules of polite speech of the culture.

In spoken English, indirect (间接的) questions are generally considered more formal (正式的) and polite than direct questions. Indirect questions are questions with extra (额外的) words and phrases to make your questions softer. Try using some of these phrases to create indirect questions, "Do you know...?", "Can/Could you tell me...?" When "Where is the bus stop?" becomes "Do you know where the bus stop is?", it sounds much more polite.

What makes a question impolite? Most people would consider a question impolite if it's asking them for information that they don't really want to share. For example, in many cultures, it is not polite to ask questions about money. If you are meeting someone for the first time, or you don't know a person very well yet, keep on the topics like sports, music, hobbies, or other general (常规的) ones.

In the English language, "magic words" are very important in polite speech. "Please" is sometimes used as a "magic word". When eating out in a restaurant, you'd better say "Check the bill, please." instead of "Bring me the bill, waiter!" Another magic word (or phrase) is "thank you". When using English to ask for things or information, it is important to use the magic words like "please" and "thank you".

Polite speech is always welcomed, so why not use it? Try to speak politely in different situations. This will help you communicate better with other people.

25. We should _____ if we want to make our questions more polite.

A. make a good choice of proper places to ask questions

B. speak louder to make everyone hear the question clearly

C. add extra words to the questions to make them sound softer

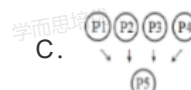

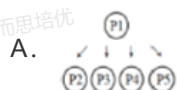

26. Which of the following is TRUE according to the text?

- A. It's not easy for the listeners to find out the impolite questions.
- B. Some "magic words" play an important role in our polite speech.
- C. Personal topics have to be talked about when we meet a stranger.

27. The writer develops his idea by _____.

- A. telling a story
- B. listing numbers
- C. comparing differences

28. What is the correct structure of the text? (P1= Paragraph 1)

6.

Now students' English handwriting(书写)gets worse and worse. That makes their teachers feel worried. Is your English handwriting beautiful? _____

Use paper with lines

When you write English words or sentences, you can use paper with lines. That will make your handwriting straight. _____ Be sure to fill the lined space completely. And make sure these capital letters (大写字母) are written properly.

Slow down

If your writing is hard to read, just slow down a little. _____ If you write too quickly, it's hard for you to stop where you should, and you may make more mistakes easily.

When you hold your pencil in the correct way, writing is much better. Some kids press down really hard when they write. That makes the hand writing bad. Try to be relaxed and don't hold the pencil so hard. Let your writing appear nice and clean. If you do so, people will guess you are a student with a good habit.

Draw more pictures

_____ While you are drawing pictures, you need to use the skills to control (控制) your pencil better. Even though you have no chance to draw at school, you can practice by drawing at home.

Handwriting is very important. Imagine you are a famous movie star or a well-known sports player, what do you do when your fans run up to you? Give them your autographs (亲笔签名), of course!
